Business as Unusual – Learning and Innovating with Peers

Who has time to work on continuous improvement, finding relevant lessons learned, and testing new ideas for our companies, our projects, and ourselves? Anyone can, if they make it a priority for personal growth and corporate strategy.

In this program, we will discuss how a dozen companies in Greater Boston formed an Owner-Architect-Engineer-Contractor Peer Learning Lab (OAEC-PLL) to discuss and improve the processes around Project Team Alignment, Owner Decision-making, Management of Design & Delivery Processes, and Knowledge Management. Our mission is to “Build a Project Culture that Fosters Respect and Trust through Collaborative Learning and Experimentation.” The presenters delivered a similar program at ABX 2018 and look forward to sharing their experiences with CMAA New England.

We will review how we established our mission and goals, determined how we interact, shared our lessons learned, and conducted our small experiments. Program attendees will also participate in facilitated small group discussions to experience first-hand how we learned with peers. In doing so, we hope to inspire program attendees to consider forming their own peer learning labs to do the same.
